

“I’ve noticed that everyone who is for abortion has already been born.” – Ronald Reagan

The reasons I am pro-life are numerous, but one of them is the fact that if I were anti-life, I would be admitting that my own life is worthless.

I am the youngest of six kids. My best friend is the youngest of nine kids. It’s obvious that if our parents had not been open to life, we would never be here. And I know that there is a reason I am here. I know that there is a reason my best friend is here. In fact, every person on earth has a valuable purpose, a worthy job to perform, a reason to live.

“For we are God’s workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do.” Ephesians 10:2.

We are God’s masterpiece. All through high school, many students are clueless as to what they want to do with their lives. Although we might not have a specific focus, it is beyond encouraging to contemplate on the words of God and of the purpose and focus He gives our lives. He has a plan for us. We have a purpose.

Supporters of abortion are blind to many things. They are blind to the fact that every person has a unique task that only they can fulfill. If we do not give them a chance to fulfill that task, no one will. Supporters of abortion do not realize that by destroying God’s workmanship, we are destroying the very people who are called to do amazing works in our world. And by denying every child in the womb of that God-given gift of purpose, we are proving that we are unworthy of it ourselves.

Not everyone will be a Mozart, and have the purpose of bringing beautiful music to our world. Not everyone is Mahatma Gandhi, with the power of influential words that will be remembered forever. But, however small it may appear, we are all in possession of a worthy purpose. J.R.R. Tolkien once said: “Even the smallest person can change the course of history.” I believe I have a purpose, and that is why I am pro-life.
